

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW ABOUT SCHOOL VOUCHERS?

In March of 2018, the UCLA Civil Rights Project convened a group of education scholars for a Capitol briefing in Washington, in the wake of the Trump administration's plans to funnel billions of dollars into vouchers—public subsidies that support private school tuition. The goal was to collect the highest-quality evidence available so that Congress would have this information at their fingertips as they considered this major change to federal K-12 education policy.

One outgrowth of this convening is a just-released book, The School Voucher Illusion: Exploring the Pretense of Equity, edited by NEPC director Kevin Welner of the University of Colorado Boulder and by NEPC fellows Gary Orfield of UCLA and Luis A. Huerta of Teachers College, Columbia University.

Ultimately, Trump's federal voucher expansion failed. However, in the years since the convening, the voucher movement has picked up steam at the state level, markedly expanding in states with Republican-led legislatures. Given this reality, it is more important than ever for practitioners, policymakers, and members of the public to understand this rapidly growing policy trend.

Accordingly, we have developed a 10-question quiz based on The School Voucher Illusion, which provides the latest historical, contextual, and empirical evidence on what we know about school vouchers. Test your understanding of what you know and what you have yet to learn about school vouchers.

The National Education Policy Center (NEPC), a university research center housed at the University of Colorado Boulder School of Education, sponsors research, produces policy briefs, and publishes expert third-party reviews of think tank reports. NEPC publications are written in accessible language and are intended for a broad audience that includes academic experts, policymakers, the media, and the general public. Our mission is to provide high-quality information in support of democratic deliberation about education policy. We are guided by the belief that the democratic governance of public education is strengthened when policies are based on sound evidence and support a multiracial society that is inclusive, kind, and just.
